'A rose is a rose,' said Gertrude Stein,
'Is a rose, is a rose, is a rose.'
But whether a rose or a salt sea Tern;
An Echinopsis or Maiden-hair fern,
I doubt if that lady knows.

For some lay stress on a sense of smell,
And some on visualization,
But I always use as a proper gauge
The erudite views of the Sunningdale sage
When seeking elucidation.

When a rose is red he calls it red;
Not orange or lilac or heather.
So with never a qualm I take his advice
And plant all my roses without thinking twice.
If they die—it's because of the weather.
